Very respectfully, G. W. ALDERMAN. Tax Collector.

Mrs. Jane Griffis.

Died at her home, a mile southeast of Starke, Monday, November 7th, Mrs.

Jane Griffis, after a long illness. Mrs. Griffis, who was Miss Jane Smith before her marriage, was born in Georgia June 12, 1834, and came to this state at an early age. Later she was married to Mr. Mauning Griffis and moved with him to Clay county. He died about twenty years ago. Later the deceased moved to Bradford county in a neighborhood where she had many relatives.

The deceased was a member of the discharged all her duties as such. She Cove Springs, clerk of court of Clay eral years. county, and one daughter, Mrs. Elias Moore, ot Starke.

The interment took place at Blue Pond cemetery Tuesday forenoon, Rev.

F. B. Johns conducting the obsequies.

Mrs. Barriel Sparkman.

Mrs. Harriet. Sparkman died at her home on Thompson street Tuesday afternoon, November 8th, at 3 o'clock, the cause of her death being a general failing attendant upon old age.

The maiden name of the deceased was Miss Harriet Jones. She was born in Georgia 86 years ago and came to Florida while it was still a territory. In 1848 she was married to Mr. Nathaniel Sparkman, who had a large plantation north of Crosby and Sampson lakes. Her husband fought in the Indian and Oivil wars and she bravely stood the hardships to which she was exposed during those storring times. In 1869 she became a widow, but lived on and managed the plantation with the help of some of her sons until the early 80's, when it was sold. For many years past she has made Starke her home and, as as "Grandma Sparkman," endeared herself to all who knew her. She was a consistent member of the Baptist church and lived a true Christian life.

The deceased is survived by nine children, six sons, Messrs. J. J. Sparkman, of Starke; N. N. Sparkman, of Crystal River; S. W. Sparkman, of Astor; R. L. and R. M. Sparkman, of Jacksonville; C. M. Sparkman, of Piant City, and three daughters, Mrs. C. B. Tillis of Waldo, and Mrs. T. F. Mansell and Mrs. W. H. Underhill, of Starke, as well as many grandchildren and greatgrandokildren. The late Captain J. M. Jones was her brother and she was the last of her family.

The interment took place at Prevatt cemetery, south of Starke, Wednesday afternoon, Rev. W. F. Malphurs officisting. A large procession of mourners showed their esteem for the deceased by following the remains to their last resting place. All of her children were present at the funeral except Messrs. N. N. and S. W. Sparkman, who could not arrive here in time to attend it.

Glass Solvent.

Hydrofluorie neid is an acid compound of hydrogen and fluorine. 'It may be prepared by the action of sulphuric acid upon cryolite in an appropriate apparatus made of lead or platinum. It may thus be readily obtained in a liquid form and is colorless. Its vapors are exceedingly poisonous, and the liquid itself, even when mixed with more or less water, causes severe swellings on the skin. Great care must therefore be taken in working with this acid. Hydrofluoric acid dissolves glass, forming hydrofluosilicic acid with its silica; hence its use for making etchings on glass .-Exchange.

When I was keepin' store in Arisony a young woman come in on the stage one evenin' and put up at the tavern. The next mornin' she come into my store and tole me she'd come out from the east to find employment. She couldn't stenograph or typewrite If she could she needn't have come away from home, but she could keep a cash account, sell goods and do any ord'nary work about the store. She was a mighty trim little body, and I tole her she'd better git married and let the other feller do the work; but she larfed and said it tuk two to make a match. I tuk her in for help, thinkin' if she turned out as well as she looked I wouldn't mind makin' the other one of the two.

But it soon appeared that she wasn't goin' to turn out as well as she looked. First thing I knowed a feller came into the store to see her that looked like a road agent. They seemed to be mighty familiar and did a lot o' talkin' in the back o' the store while I was engaged waitin' on a customer in the front. When the feller went out I said to the young woman, says I:

"Rosy"-that was her name-"if you're cahoots with a gang o' robbers the sooner you git out the better."

"Oh, that feller was all right!" she said. "Who is he?"

"Why, he's my brother." "Your brother!" I says, turnin' away from her contemptuously. "If that's the kind of family y' belong to I don't think much of yer stock." There was nothin' more said about it at the time, but I done up a lot o' thinkin'. Fust off I thort I'd better give the young woman the grand bounce, but I didn't know whether she was up to anything or not, and if she wasn't I didn't want to lose her. She wasn't so much use about the store-I didn't have so very much for her to do

-but I'd got a hankerin' after her. Well, the next thing that happened one-night on a settle in the back o' the store when I heered somethin' rattlin' at the front door. I jist reached back under a piller, tuck my weepon and let drive through the panel I heered a yell an', goin' to the door, listened. Not hearin' anything more, I opened the door and by the light of a match I struck saw drops o' blood leadin' away. I calc'lated I'd hit some un' who was goin' to rob the store.

Wal, this thing comin' so soon after the visit of Rosy's brother, I didn't know what to think about it. I noticed when I tole her about it she looked kinder quar.

"Hope he warn't yer brother," I said to her, an' I thort she was goin' to faint. Seein' it bothered her to talk about it I didn't say nothin' more, and after awhile she righted, though for a few days she didn't look very cheerful. But one day the feller that she said was her brother come in. He looked kind o' white in the face. He talked with Rosy awhile an' went out.

"Reckon yer brother's been sick," I says, a-sympathizin' with her. "Yes," she says, "he has."

"What's he do fer a livin'?" "He aint doin' nothin' jist now. I'm tryin' to git a place fer him. Trade's mighty brisk lately. Don't yer think y' need a shippin' clerk?"

"I don't think I do." I wondered if she thort I was soft enough to believe the feller was her brother and out of employment. I reckoned he wasn't employed, except when he was holdin' up a coach or somepin' like that. And I reckoned she'd have to do a lot o' coaxen to git me to take in a man to work who'd tried to rob me and I'd winged when he was startin' in to do it. But we then are kind o' quar 's well as the wimmen. One day the feller come into the store in a hurry. Rosy was there and turned pale. He said somep'n to her quick, and she p'inted under the counter. He ducked just in time to dodge the sheriff, who come runnin' in with a weepon in one hand and a pa'r o' bracelets in t'other. Rosy she stood up agin the counter right where the feller wor hid. "Enny one come in here?" asked the sheriff. Now, I'm a-goin' to explain why we men is quar as well as the wimmen. Rosy she give me jist one look. She might as well have sent a few ounces o' lead at me, so far as my doin' enny interference was concerned.

"Hain't seen no one," I says, talkin' parrot-like, jest as Rosy wanted me to. "Singular; I thort I had him cornered."

He was out in a jiffy, and when the danger was past Rosy put the feller in a back office I had my boots in and called me in too.

"You're a trump!" she says. "And yer brother's the knave," I says, replyin'. that he'd gone had and she'd come out to reclaim him. She had got him to ise to go east with her, but she skin't get him off onless I'd help her instead o' givin' 'em away. I tole her I'd de all I could on condition she'd come beek and run her part o' the store and me, too, as she'd been a doin' of it. She premised, and I got 'em away safe.
